Presented by Cindy Grady

Review of PowerPoint presentation. Discussion ensues regarding age of those committing violent offenses and general trends. Public Health uses Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) data for classifying violent crimes. Discussion of connecting CJC data with Public Health and Violence Prevention data, potentially with city data as well. Discussion of offense classification and how municipal charges will be handled. Challenges with under-reporting of offenses and verifying whether or not an offense occurred, particularly with UCR data. This applies to a number of offenses, including offenses against children. Discussion of differences between NIBRS vs. UCR datasets. Additional discussion regarding juvenile offenses, justice-involved youth, and diverting youth who enter the system at a younger age before greater system involvement. More data will be needed to connect these different populations and issues, and work must be shared transparently throughout.
