Community Agriculture

Dane County Parks supports community and market grower gardens by providing land when it aligns with a park's master plan or overall property goals.

Dane County Parks does not have the capacity to directly manage gardens. Instead, the county relies on non-profit partners to take on the management and oversight of gardening operations. These partner organizations must be financially self-sufficient, covering all costs related to maintenance, infrastructure, and programming.

Each partner must enter into a formal agreement, lease, or permit that outlines their responsibilities, including garden management, maintenance, and compliance with county policies.
