C. Brief report from Commissioner McKinney (tentative)

- Late last year, commissioner McKinney held focus groups to hear from community funding recipient stakeholders
- This community initiative was developed in response to limited available grant funds and increasing requests for funding. McKinney sought to determine if the current funding model continues to meet community needs, and whether other funding models should be considered.
- 200 individuals responded via surveys and focus groups. A limitation of the findings is that respondents are majority Madison residents.
- Findings revealed that Dane Arts is perceived as successfully meeting the mission (engaging participation, connecting people, and inspiring expressive living in Dane County), but articulating the mission is difficult for focus group respondents.
- In response to alternative funding models, respondents did not favor limiting access to awards in any way (funding less applications, but fully). Community members expressed value in an endorsement from Dane Arts. Interest was expressed in creating application segmentation based on operating budget size.
- Legacy funding opportunities that exist with the Madison Arts Commission and the Wisconsin Arts Board that demonstrate trust-based processes for established organizations were referenced favorably.
- Respondents noted the importance of transparency around how funding is distributed so that applicants may anticipate potential grant award amounts accurately.
- A trust-based model enabling organizations to execute their creative vision was commonly noted as highly favorable.
- Beyond grants, conversations around cultivating a healthy arts ecosystem developed within focus groups.

D. Staff Recommendations on Alternative Grant Allocations Models

- Dane Arts staff recommendations will be formed based on community feedback.
- After McKinney's findings are discussed and synthesized, Dane Arts staff will propose changes. A timeline to implement an updated funding model with adequate time to communicate changes to the community will also be proposed.

E. Commissioner Roster Update

1. New Commissioner

- Executive Agard recently appointed a new member to the Dane Arts Commission.
- Commissioner on-boarding will be conducted by Vice Chair Puleo Moyer.

2. Renewal/replacement process

New process: Commissioners will be asked to send a letter directly to the County Executive via email indicating whether or not they would like to seek term renewal. Chair Ritcherson will communicate this process with the County Executive.

F. Friends of Dane Arts Update

- Bylaws call for up to nine board members, and four board members have been appointed. Each board member has their own area of expertise.
- Friends of Dane Arts is a membership organization with potential for annual income streams. Options for membership incentives will be discussed.
- Chair Ritcherson will open a bank account for the Friends group today.

G. Executive Director's Report

1. 2026 overall activities projections
