Who are we?

I am a Staff Attorney with Community Justice, Inc. I established The Municipal Defense Project 2016 with a grant from the Madison Community Foundation. We were inspired at CJI to create this program by a former staff attorney on our team. She represented a community member experiencing homelessness through a State Public Defender appointment and realized this client had over 40 municipal tickets incurred as the direct result of his unsheltered status. Our program exists to provide legal representation to individuals in similar circumstances who are disproportionately receiving tickets as they struggle to meet basic needs of shelter, food, and comfort. We pair qualifying individuals with volunteer attorneys from the greater-Madison area who work with the municipal court and city attorney staffs to achieve the best outcome for all vested parties. Many times, this leads to tickets getting dropped altogether or greatly reduced and converted to community service hours. The overarching impact of this work is to eliminate barriers for our community members seeking long-term, stable housing. Dealing with these tickets improves credit scores, reduces risk of jail time, and eliminates blemishes from court records that often prohibit housing searches down the road.

Who are our clients?

Our clients come from a wide range of backgrounds, ranging in age, race, gender, and sexual orientation. This population includes runaway teenagers and military veterans, as well as parents and grandparents caring for children of all ages. Many of our clients are managing untreated mental health conditions and substance abuse histories. Our clients include employed individuals, and those who have been on federal disability their entire lives. Attempting to portray a typical client is nearly impossible. However, there is no question that homelessness disproportionately affects those of minority communities, and it is often substantially more difficult for these individuals to transition out of homelessness.

Where do we meet our clients?

We conduct outreach at the Beacon Day Shelter on Thursday mornings, and at First United Methodist Church on Wednesday mornings. We also welcome referrals from partner agencies and our sister program at Sankofa.
