D. Presentations

1. RSVP Volunteer Services Programs Update

RSVP Director Margie Zutter updated members on the volunteer services currently provided by RSVP over the past year. Half of the staff is back in the office working, with others working remotely. Audio and video monthly meetings have been set up so volunteers can remain engaged. These monthly Zoom meetings have included activities, lectures on topics of interest and the means to connect with fellow volunteers while isolated. The success of the Computer Buddy program, expanded to include Cambridge and DeForest area elementary students, was mentioned as a means for engaging new volunteers during the pandemic as these volunteers work with students via Zoom since schools don't want more volunteers in the classrooms until COVID transmission is not an issue.

RSVP Groups Project Coordinator Kate Seal talked about projects the volunteers have been working on. Currently there are 200-250 project volunteers sewing, knitting or crocheting items that are then donated throughout Dane County. The most requested items have been hats, mittens, quilts and totes. The group made 6,000 facemasks that were handed out through the ADRC and Focal Points. Volunteers have been busy making different quilts for vets, fidget quilts for persons with dementia, and weighted shawls for Meriter Hospital. Chemo hats for UW Hospital have been a big request as well. During the summer two groups were able to get together at a local barn and make over 1,000 bags to be donated.

AAA Aging Specialist Angela Velasquez commented that RSVP volunteers are vital to the success of many aging services offered throughout Dane County. In fact, home-delivered meals would have cost the county $366,000 in mileage alone if we did not have volunteers helping with delivery.
